Mr. Cronin is proprietor of the galoon, principal proprietor of the Fair Roofing Company, Speaker of the House of Deleview

The saloon, which appears to be, at least in a degree, the target of the order from Mr. Hawes, is located on the northeast corner of Twelfth and Walnut streets, directly across the street from the east entrance to the City Hall. The building has the shape of a warehouse, and part of it is used as such, Cronin's saloon being in the extreme southwest corner. A desk in the sitting-room adjoining the bar is the office of the

It has been publicly said of Mr. Cronin that he has used his potentiality as Speaker to influence the holding up, delaying and amending of bills, thereby opposing the progressive policy of Mayor Wells and the City Council and the Bourd of Public Improvements. The organization known as the combine and composed of nineteen Delegates is said to be Mr. Cronin's instrument.

The combine's antagonistic attitude toward the present administration is generally thought to be responsible for the order to change the police Sergeants and patrolmen, as President Hawes has declared oppositions. opposition to all persons at war with Mayor Wells. Declares Mayor Wells's Policy Is the Best St. Louis Has Known Since the Scheme and Charter Was Adopted-He Says That He Helped Elect Mr. Wells and That the Combine Is Not Organized Against City's Executive.

"EVERY MAN WHO WHOOPS CAN'T HAVE A JOB," SAYS BUTLER.

PUNGENT POINTS FROM COLONEL BUTLER'S

TALK ABOUT THE CITY ADMINISTRATION. > 'If Mayor Wells and the heads of city departments were to permit members of the House of Delegates to have all the patronage their wards demanded, the combine would exist just the same."

"There are some fellows who want to hold office all their lives. They are disappointed. I think it's good for them to let somebody else have a chance once in awhile, even if it does upset them a bit. "If Mayor Wells and the heads of city , departments were to permit members of the House of Delegates to have all the patronage they desire in their respective wards, the combine would exist just the same. It's natural to have a combine in the House of Delegates. It has been so far the last fifteen years under both Republican and Democratic administrations. The worst one I have ever known, and I know something about House of Delegate combines, was the one preceding this admin-istration, when there were only four Dem-ocrats in the House."

ocrats in the House."

So said Edward Butler, Sr., yesterday.
"How to break a combine? I've a notion not to tell you, but I guess I will. It's easy. It can be done by defeating its members at election and putting new men in office to form a new combine. Another way is to crush one combine with a stronger one, but in either case—I may say in any case—you still have a combine, the ony difference being in the men composing

"Do you think the present combine is or-ganized against Mayor Wells and his ad-mint-ration?" Mr. Butler was asked.
"I do not," he replied. "In fact, I know that it is not, and there's nothing at his disposal that would change the situation."
"What, then, is the combine organized

Mayor Wells would turn the city patronage over to them.

"The politicians did not nominate Mayor Wells and the last Democratic ticket. They had nothing to do with it. William H. Swift, Harry B. Hawes, Ed Buller. Bernard P. Taaffe, James McCaffrey, and a majority of the City Democratic Central Committee, were asked by the "Solar Walkers" if they could elect the ticket proposed. The answer was 'yes,' and the goods were delivered. They don't care for them, and, instead of demanding improvements, they oppose them when they must foot the bill. They do not go to Councilment, but to their delegates with their protests and that is one strong reason why the House may be expected to holp up some of those improvement bills indefinitely."

"Does the character of material, in your opinion, cut any figure?"

"I think it does."

"To what extent does it influence the House?"

"And you are satisfied with the administration of Mayor Wells?"

"I am so. If it had been different I would have been disappointed. I wanted him to be nominated and elected. I am a heavy property owner in St. Louis, and a business administration is decidedly to my interest. The persons who talk about there being a fight between Mayor Wells and myself know better. I supported him honestly, and I've never asked him for a thing. If I want anything I'll go right to him for it, and maybe I'll get it."

"Then you think his administration has clear sailing ahead?"

"I do not. I know better. There are Democrats in the Council, elected last spring, who would bolt him to-morrow if they had a following to back them up. I am positive that those fellows will make trouble for him if they ever get the chance. When the next election places six new Councilmen in office the men who brought Rolla Wells forward want to make it their business to elect six Democratic business men, that the Mayor can trust. If they do not, the seven holdovers and those elected to oppose him will destroy his administration. It will place a cambine in the Council, and, as I have said, there is always a combine in the House, and no administration can weather a joint combine. "I ray the men who put Rolla Wells"." "If this administration is a failure it will not be the fault of Mayor Wells. You can remember that—I mean it. It will be the fault of men who promised him support and failed to deliver the goods. He is all right. He is doing all he agreed to do. His office is the business headquarters of the city, not a loafing place. He is doing his best to conduct the business of the city as it should be conducted. All he needs is help from the people who induced him to undertake the job, and he'll demand that help right up to the finish if he's as smart a man as I take him to be."

You cannot even conceive the effect of those terrible shots upon that vast assemblage; it seemed as though every one had lost at once his dearest of kin. ministration."

"They you think Mayor Wells is all right?"

"Unquestionably he is the best Mayor, and his is the best administration we have had since the adoption of the scheme and charter, and the present Council is the best we have had in that time. There are not enough corrupt men in the Council to form a combine if both Democrats and Republicans open to influence pooled issues. There are more really good, pure men in this Council than in any since the first two Councils elected under our charter, and no one in this city knows more about Councils than I do. I know something about Mayors, too, That's true. There's no egotism, buncombe nor damned nonsense about this."

"The House is all right. Let me tell you something about the House. Its members have only wards to represent, and they are, nine times out of ten, better acquainted with and nearer to their constituents than Councilmen are. They see and talk with them often, and they generally do what they understand the majority wants done. There will be hills held up by the House, and, as far as I can see, there will be no help for it. Take the matter of street improvement—paying—by special tax bill. That is all right in the West End, where the owners of property are well-to-do and don't know what it is to want, but with 60 per cent of the people in St. Louis, mostly in the Tenth and Eleventh Congressional districts, it is different. The laborers of North and South St. Louis will not average more than $1.25 a day and they never work every day in the year. Secretary of the Treasury Will Increase the Money in Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 10 .- The following anouncement was made to-day at the Treasury Department: gives notice that he will receive and con sider proposals for the sale to the Govern ment, on account of the sinking fund of 1908-1918; 4 per cent bonds, funded loan of 1907; 4 per cent bonds, loan of 1925, and 5 per cent bonds, loan of 1984, to an amount rot exceeding $20,000,000. Explaining his offer to purchase bonds to-day. Secretary Gage said that the active movement of crops has begun throughout the country and that he did not desire that the Treasury should absorb millions of dollars that might be in trade channels. The Subtreasuries in the West and South have been calling heavily for currency to move the crops and the amount sent so far is in excess of any year in the history of the Treasury.

is in excess of any year in the history of the Treasury.

Will Increase Circulation.

The placing of additional money with the mational bank depositaries will, as Secretary Gage indicates in his letter, divertabout $5,000,000 from Treasury vaults and put it into circulation. At the same time the purchase of $20,000,000 in bonds would be a decided relief. The only question now is whether the offers to the Secretary will be, such as to induce him to purchase the amount he desires or any sum at all. The tendency in offers of this kind is to cause the prices of bonds to rise. Becretary Gage does not intend to pay above what the bonds are worth, and will make no purchases if the offers indicate that the market prices are to be raised. The money will be kept in the Treasury in preference to this.

May Increase Price of Bends.

Last April Secretary Gage made an offer to purchase bonds to relieve the constantly increasing addition to the cash balance of the Treasury, but he fixed prices at which the Government would buy. These prices have governed the purchases of all bonds to this time. The price limit is now removed for the first time and offers are asked for, with the supposition that the prices will be such as will permit the Secretary to invest a number of millions of the Treasury surplus in a short time.

Since the offer of the Secretary last April the Treasury has purchased a total of about $50,00,000 in bonds and these have gone into the sinking fund, thereby decreasing the interest payments of the Government. The purchases have been made slowly, sometimes a few thousands in one day and on other days reaching into the hundreds of thousands.
